

Drifting Away

Ashley Locke

This mind of mine is fanatical, misunderstood
That mind of yours is going crazy from the loss of blood

Can someone tell me if this is really such a miracle?
To be the same as everyone else, yet be so different, such an oracle?

Everyday it's the same thing, yet you never seem to notice any of the changes
I'm not the same right now and the new you is expiring

But it's the old news that you cling to.

I can pave a way because there's no more time, there's nothing right.
I know you're hurting
I see everyone hurting

I can pave a way because there's more to do than cry
When sitting between truth and lies with no one to trust

With no adoration we all drift away.

With a goal to please, they gave up everything that they believe
But in return you give them coal on Christmas Eve

Drifting away down a river so damn endlessly
Into a world where compassion constantly battles sympathy

I'd stay right by your side, if holding you close would make everything better
The timing isn't right and instead you're expiring

And changing the future for us all won't be an easy dream.

I can pave a way because there's no more time
They're wasting life
I know you're crying
I see people crying

I can pave a way if you believe there's more to life
Take a leap into your dreams there's no more tries

With no adoration we all drift away.
With no adoration we all lose our way.